There are a number of important meetings coming up in January; we'll try to keep you informed of them.

The annual meeting Lynchburg Feeder Cattle Association meets January 6 at Holiday Inn North. Members will certainly want to be present for this important program.

An Area Swine School will be held at Buckingham County High School January 12 at 4:00 p.m. If you are in the hog business or plan to go in you'll want to attend this program.

At Williamsburg January 18 the Virginia Corn Growers Association will hold their annual meeting. O. H. Tolley, Jr. is one of the Vice-Presidents of this group. They have a terrific program lined up. Sonny tells me he'll be glad to have you ride with him to this meeting. The Banquet Speaker will be Gaylord Perry, a farmer and former major league pitcher.

The flu-cured tobacco marketing program was accepted in the referendum held on December 16. This means that poundage quotas and price supports will be available for the next four years.

Its appropriate that we take a look at the outlook for 1977. For wheat we have just produced extremely high yields in both 1975 and 1976. The result is a large carry over - the largest since the early '60's. The key to wheat demand is exports. For several years 55 percent of our output has gone as exports. India, Russia, Japan, and Brazil take 50 percent of the exports or about 27 percent of our total production. But exports are expected to be down; worldwide production is up 15 percent. Canada's 1976 crop was 38 percent greater compared to 1975.

Generally we do not feed much wheat because in comparison to corn it is costly. This year the relationship is much better and we'll see more wheat fed.

With this kind of situation we could possibly have wheat prices at $2.00 or less per bushel in 1978. This years price is projected at $2.50 - $2.75.

Corn growers harvested the largest corn crop on record, a six billion bushel crop. This plus the carry over results in a 6.4 billion bushel supply. Corn is a feed crop with hogs comsuming 34 percent of production, dairy 19 percent, poultry 19 percent and cattle-on feed 15 percent.

Thirty percent of U. S. Corn is exported. Its anticipated that exports will be down slightly because of increased production worldwide.

Corn planting intention appears to be down, but this can alter the price of corn next fall. Currently a price of $2.45 per bushel is projected for mid-summer.

The soybean outlook is bright; consumption has been moving at record rates since the first party of 1976 and there were 250 million fewer bushels produced. All this suggests lower supplies and higher prices.

Poultry is the largest consumer of soybean meal in this county; eating 45 percent of available meal, while hogs consume 29 percent. It is estimated that by August 31, 1977 there will be less than a months supply of soybeans on hand. There are several restraints that will probably hold soybean prices down: (1) The price relationship between corn and beans. (2) the availability of soybeans from Brazil after March 1977 (3) competetion from palm oil. Prices may reach $7.25 in May, however, persons with beans in storage should be hesitant to hold past March 1977. Some knowledgable people are saying that when the '77 crop reaches $6.25 to $6.50 a bushel an effort should be made to sell by contracting or hedging part of the '77 crop.

There appears to be a historical relationship between the Soybean/corn price ratio and the change in soybean acreage from the privious year. When the price ratio is above 2.5 soybean acreage has a tendency to go up compared to the previous year. In 1977 the current soybean/corn price ratio is about 3:1. Based on historical relationship this indicates that soybean acreage in 1977 should increase anout 5 million acres. If this occurs it would mean soybean prices in 1977-78 will be lower and corn prices would be higher than 1976-77 given normal yields and exports in line with 1976-77.

Neal M. Cabaniss

DEC. 30 - Navy Hospital Corpsman Second Class Neal M. Cabaniss, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cabaniss of Route 4, Appomattox, Va., was a member of a naval task group which visited Mombasa, Kenya, for the 13th anniversary of Kenya Independence.

He is serving as a crew member abroad the amphibious assault ship USS Guam, homeported in Norfolk.

The task group was composed of two other ships and two Marine Corps aircraft squadrons, with a combined complement of nearly 2,000 U. S. Navymen and Marines. The four-day, goodwill visit was made at the request of the Kenyan government and provided for a period of rest and refueling after outine fleet operations in the Indian Ocean.

AV-8A "Harrier" jet aircraft from Marine Attack Squadron (VMA)-231, flying from the USS Guam, performed a ceremonial "fly-by" for official celebrations in the capitol city of Nairobi, 250 miles inland. Visitors were welcomed aboard his ship and a special program was set up for Kenyan naval officers and enlisted men to meet with their American counterparts for social and professional exchanges. He and his shipmates also had the opportunity to do some sightseeing in the East African part, including tours of wild game parks and local shopping bazaars.

A graduate of Appomattox County High School, he joined the Navy in February, 1973.

Diet Institute To Begin Wednesday

Want to lose weight? Easily? Successfully - forever? It can be done, says Martha Stimpson, former news editor of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN, and the newly named lecturer and organizer of the Conway Diet Institute which will meet in Appomattox Wednesday evening, January 12 at Fidelity Branch Bank at 7 p.m.

The three-part Conway Diet plan stresses a nutritious, 1,000 calorie-a-day diet, and weekly seminars to help the overweight examine their problem, and then, change their lifestyles so that they can maintain a proper, becoming and healthful weight.

There's no need, either, says Mrs. Stimpson, for the dieter to eat a separate diet. A recipe book is issued by the Conway Institute and members are encouraged to prepare recipes from it for the entire family.

Does it work? "Yes!", says Mrs. Stimpson, emphatically, "I was interested in the Conway Diet because of my own tendency to go up and down in weight, mostly UP !" She has lost 15 pounds recently using the plan, and invites both men and women who are overweight to meet on Wednesday evening whether they wish to lose 5 pounds or 105.

At that time, the group will be asked to vote on whether Wednesday evening is suitable for a meeting time or whether another night, perhaps one that doesn't conflict with many church activities, will be best.

Mrs. Stimpson lives in Brookneal and is married to the Reverend Millard G. Stimpson, former pastor of Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church, Walker's Church and Stonewall Presbyterian. She was news editor of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN for ten years until June, 1972.

PROPOSED DESIGNATES THE APPOMATTOX AS A VIRGINIA SCENIC RIVER

Alternative river uses such as municipal water supply or hydroelectic power generation are not anticipated on this portion of the Appomattox River in the foreseeable future.

The primary purpose of seeking Scenic River designation for a portion of the Appomatox is to help insure the preservation and protection of its scenic, historic and recreational attributes. This preservation and protection will be achieved in two ways, first by prohibiting the construction of a dam without the express authorization of the General Assembly and secondly by focusing attention on the river by identifying it as a natural resource of statewide significance, thereby compelling planners and decision makers at all levels to closely consider any action which might adversely affect the natural or scenic character of the river.

GOOD NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS

By Shirley W. Walton

RATTAN AND WICKER FURNITURE

Today rattan and wicker furniture has wide spread appeal. Rattan is a rugged woody vine that can be steamed and formed into desired shapes. Debarked rattan can be finished and colored. Indonesian rattan retains it's bark-a golden color but can be browned or scorched between the joints to emphasize the natural look. Rattan, unlike wood, replenishes itself very rapidly, providing a plentiful supply.

Wicker is a rattan core. Reed is also used like wicker for weaving sides, backs, and trim of rattan. Peel (also called cane) is the outside skin of rattan that has been split into uniform strands and woven, while wet, into chair seats, backs, and trim. It is also used for wrapping joints on rattan furniture.

Bamboo is a hollow lightweight, woody tropical grass, used mostly for accent pieces.

Quality rattan is free of discoloration and physical defects. Joints should be 12 to 18 inches apart and should not be noticeably large, not have a knotty look. Joints should be close fitting for greater strength and pleasing appearance. The proper methods of joining is with a longwood screw of proper size, no nails or staples should be used. Rattan should be round with no flat planes.

Quality rattan always uses genuine peel cane binding to decorate the joints. It should be smooth and without discoloration and should be tightly applied. Most table tops on rattan furniture will have rattan molding that fits flush with table top and is very smooth to the tough. Where rattan molding is joined on table tops should be close fitting.

Mitered corners are also a mark of quality. Molding should be attached with glue and counter-sunk fastners. A wood-en frame is generally used to hold the underseat construction and a resilient rubber webbing is firmly attached. Straps or springs should not be attached diretly to rattan, since they will pull and distort the rattan used in the frame. Rubber webbing is preferable to support cushions. Final proof is the touch test. The furniture should be completely smooth and free of fuzz indicating proper sanding and spraying of finish coats. Cane, including binding, should be smooth and also free of fuzz.

Care of rattan furniture is important. Routine dusting is necessary. Periodically it can be wiped clean with a well-wrung-out cloth that has been dipped in warm water. After drying frames, apply liquid furniture wax for sheen and protection. Loose cushions should be turned periodically to keep covers looking fresh and shapely.

MEN OR WOMEN SAFER?

No doubt, everyone has his or her own opinion as to who are safer drivers - men or women. Most people queried on the subject normally vote for their own sex. But that's pure guesswork with a little ego-factor thrown in. According to statistics compiled by the National Safety Council, there is a definite relationship between accident rates, age and sex. Happy or not - here they are.

The safest drivers on the road are women between the ages of 16 and 25. However, women over 45 are either very good drivers or very bad ones.

The real killer on wheels is most likely to be a male under the age of 25. According to the records, he does most of his killing on weekends during the hours of darkness. There were more than 50,000 persons killed on U.S. highways last year and one third of the fatal accidents involved drivers under the age of 25. This is why insurance rates are usually higher for young male drivers.
